Screenur is a screenshot capture and upload tool that runs in both the Mac and Windows versions, and it isn't difficult to use. The app can capture the entire desktop in two clicks or it can capture a specific area and save it in a specific folder. You can save captured images to Imgur and view them later on or send them straight away. Lightweight and fully portable, it can be used on any device. One click to grab and another to upload If you wish to take a screenshot, just

press the ALT+CTRL+3 keyboard shortcut. The screenshot will be saved to the machine's clipboard, and you can then paste it to any other application. You can also use the CTRL+SHIFT+3 and CTRL+SHIFT+4 shortcuts to capture an entire desktop image or an area of your desktop. The latter feature can be used to capture only specific icons, such as a web browser or application. This app will not run on Windows 7, so you'll have to put up with the annoyances of Windows Vista and Windows XP. Is it worth downloading? The developers managed to get it up and running fast, and the process is quite quick. There are a few drawbacks, however, and we'd like to point these out. To begin with, the text box used to enter the URL is very small, and you may have trouble entering a particularly long link. Also, you are not offered the option to add a caption to the captured image. You cannot choose a download location, either. It is possible to choose where you want to upload the screenshot, and you can set the image's dimensions, but you cannot choose a file directory. This is where the lack of features comes into play, and you will likely be more prone to encounter errors than if you had installed the app. You can save a capture either to Imgur or any other image hosting service, but there is no way of choosing the latter option. There is the option to email the image directly, and this could be a useful feature when you have taken a screenshot of a web page. Of course, there are no options to capture an application or a window, and to view the exact dimensions of the drawing box. Conclusion We were a little surprised to see that Screenur does not offer the ability to choose the location of the image files before uploading, but the developers have stated that they will likely add that feature in 6a5afdab4c
