CFS/ME. Fibromyalgia syndrome (FMS) is known to be one of the most common fatigue/pain syndromes in which patients report different types of central and peripheral pain. As endogenous cannabinoids play an important role in the regulation of peripheral nociception, the aim of this study was to evaluate the possible effect of peppermint oil (Mentha piperita) on autonomic nerve function in FMS. Patients with FMS (according to the ACR criteria) and healthy controls were randomized to two groups (placebo and peppermint oil) and underwent a battery of tests to measure heart rate variability (HRV) and pain threshold. Peppermint oil lowered pain threshold, whereas it did not affect HRV. Patients with FMS treated with peppermint oil reported significant improvements in fatigue ($p = 0.002$). Our findings suggest that peppermint oil might be of potential value in the symptomatic
