I'm focusing on this object for some time, but I don't know what to do. Terence: how, please. [aloud] but the result I obtained as incorrect! I failed! Jean: but how? and why? Terence: [grimly] I can not explain it! Jean: Oh, no!... I don't want to understand, even... so badly. Terence: well, I'm finished... [He begins to shake]Phylogenetic analysis of insecticidal glycosidase genes reveals a new mechanism of action for a lepidopteran-specific toxin. Toxin-encoding genes were recovered from the lepidopteran Bt sp. strain HD100, a new variant of Bacillus thuringiensis producing a new toxin, known as Cry1E. Sequence analysis of the cry1E gene showed that the protein is a Cry1J variant, which is encoded by a previously characterized insecticidal gene (cry1I). The phylogenetic analysis revealed that this new Cry protein is located in a new phylogenetic branch of the CryII subfamily. The results show that these strains harbor another gene that encodes a toxin with a different specificity and a different mode of action.1. the seat of his trousers. It reminded him of the uniform worn by spies and couriers around the world. Then he noticed a shadow swoop through the trees and out of sight behind a thick clump of bushes. Kevin stepped into the road. "A spot of theft?" As the shadow passed beyond the reach of Kevin's torch, his skin prickled. There was a foreign quality to the air. He squinted, trying to see. He had done this before. The devil moves in ways and at unexpected times. A click and his torch flared up, bathing the area in a stream of light. He saw the shape of a human figure beside the road, out of the shadows. The figure was wearing a dark suit and a floppy cap. But as he approached, the figure's eyes opened, and it became obvious that he was blind. A beam of sunlight lit up the figure's face. Kevin saw a young man, no more than twenty-five years old, with skin the color of coffee and eyes like black shining glass. Kevin said, "Who are you, and what are you doing here?" The young man smiled. "You have asked me that question a hundred times over the last two years. It is a good question, Kevin. But I will answer it for the first time in two days. You will be able to answer it yourselves." Kevin's voice rose in alarm. "Nobody else knows about the town?" The stranger said, "There are twelve other visitors like us. But they are in another town." "This town is very big." "I thought you would have noticed," the stranger said. "You are in a town that is of no significance. This is not a town like your own. Here, people go to parties and the guests wear clothes that are brightly colored. The party guests play games and roll hoops and play musical instruments and watch fireworks and eat music all through the night. You call this normal. You take your life as it comes, from one day to the next. Our lives are different." Kevin turned to his parents. "What is going on?" His father looked helpless. "Your mother and I don't know. You had a nightmare. You woke up screaming, and we took you to the doctor." Kevin's mother burst into tears. "Kevin, I'm sorry to have worried you." Kevin turned back to the stranger. "I
