A protest leader linked to al-Qaeda has said the group's leader, Ayman al-Zawahiri, will no longer heed orders from the group's leader, Osama bin Laden, who died in Pakistan on Monday. Bin Laden was the ideological leader of al-Qaeda and the head of the group. "He will not listen to him [bin Laden]," Mahmoud al-Muif, an al-Qaeda protest leader in northern Pakistan, told the Associated Press. "Al-Zawahiri [bin Laden's successor] has his own will and opinion." Al-Muif said bin Laden's death "does not mean the death of jihad," and that the "Mujahedeen are still there. They are in every place." Al-Muif said bin Laden had passed on his orders to al-Zawahiri. The group has called on Pakistani leaders to close their borders with Afghanistan to ease the U.S.-led "war on terrorism," and urged all Muslims to avenge the death of bin Laden. "The head of the Jihad, Osama, is not dead. He is wounded and on his way to the highest heaven," a Pakistani Taliban website said on Wednesday. Al-Muif said the Pakistani Taliban did not have a "leader," and called for an end to the Pakistani government's "hostage crisis" of ca3bfb1094
