Is there any kind of prefabricated "fence" available for this purpose? Hi Pauline, You can make your own version of a cat safe fence using wooden fencing and posts. We make a 5ft cage using 1.5cm thick wood and strong bonding glue. The size of the cage can be adapted so it fits well around your fencing (maybe 1.5m wide), and it is ideal for indoor or outdoor cat use. If you order this cat safe fence, it is a seamless design, and the plan is for it to be very sturdy. The fence is easy to build and to fit. Also, the design is proven to stop cats climbing through. I hope this is helpful. If you require more information, please let me know. The term prefabricated house fence is used for fence posts, because the "fences" can be delivered by the prefabricated house fences manufacturers.Development and Validation of New ICD-11 PTSD Module for DSM-5. Internet safety tips Parents on websites have a responsibility to protect the privacy and safety of their children. We want them to be able to play safely in cyberspace, which is why we continually update and add items to this page to help keep them that way. Here are some guidelines for keeping kids safe and being a good parent on the Internet. With the advent of the Internet, it can be difficult to tell which websites are safe for children and which ones aren't. Below are some general guidelines that will help you to identify safe websites and to make sure you're meeting your children's needs on the Internet. All sites are not created equal. Just because a site says it is for kids doesn't mean it is safe for children. Clickjacking — when a site appears to be interacting with a user but actually redirects them to a site that looks harmless — is a common and dangerous problem that can give a scary website a more innocent appearance. (See If I'm a bad parent, I'll report you for security lapses.) Just because a site says it is for kids doesn't mean it is safe for children. Clickjacking — when a site appears to be interacting with a user but actually redirects them to a site that looks harmless — is a common and dangerous problem that can give a scary website a more innocent appearance. (See.) All is not lost, even if a site appears safe; if you notice anything suspicious, report it to us at abuse@yourownchild.com. Many sites offer relatively harmless fun but don't require an extreme level of security, such as serious games or quizzes. Some are just special fun for kids on-site. Many fun sites (including a lot of games) require a membership or subscription so that the site can keep you logged in and earning points or other rewards. Some sites don't require membership but they do require you to log in, even if you don't earn anything. Most of these sites are not as safe as they seem. We've included a list of some of the best child-safe sites at the bottom of the article, but it doesn't offer a definitive list — and, unfortunately, we don't think any list can ever be definitive. What we can offer is a starting point for you to start thinking about and thinking through this issue. Avoid these five categories of sites: Free Trial Sites. Free trial sites are sites that require you to register and pay a
