String str1 = "abcdefghi"; String str2 = "abcd"; What I want to know is how can I extract the matched characters from str1 or str2. For example, say I want to extract "abcd" from str2, so the output should be "abcd". I am using Regex for this. A: You don't need regex. You can split your string to get an array of characters and then compare that to str2. String str1 = "abcdefghi"; String str2 = "abcd"; int length = str1.length(); String[] array1 = str1.split(""); String[] array2 = str2.split(""); for(int i = 0; i

Movie A motion picture, film, motion, picture show, or similar depiction of motion is a series of still images which, when shown in succession, appear to be in motion. This is generally done by using an alternating series of rapid successive exposures of a light-sensitive sheet, such as a piece of film, a display device using electron-bombarded liquid-crystal cells, or a cathode-ray tube, to produce an image of a succession of still pictures. The number of frames in each second of film may range from 24 to 250, depending on the standards of the motion picture film industry in various countries. Motion pictures use film, video tape, and digital projection to record and display moving images. By the early 20th century the motion picture industry was already a major form of entertainment, but the invention of cinematography and the development of the motion picture projector allowed filmmakers to show scenes as realistically as they could be perceived, and by the 1920s motion pictures were also becoming one of the first mass media. Thesis help online custom writing services Do not smoke cigarettes during pregnancy Original sin full text ebookThe people versus the wall The Wall — the partition that cut Gaza’s residents off from the outside world for years — is being removed in the next few days. The Gaza border wall is being dismantled. Can you imagine: The half a million people living under an Israeli siege for seven years finally being able to get outside for a decent stroll on a daily basis. The World Health Organization (WHO) and the human rights group, Al Mezan, have voiced concern that children, or young people in general, are being exposed to a lifetime of health problems as a result of living under siege for so many years. There are reports that children are growing thinner from malnutrition; that younger children are susceptible to respiratory diseases and stunted growth; and that children with compromised immune systems have a higher death rate from polio and other causes. “The population of Gaza has been under siege for years. It is overcrowded, and people are living hand-to-mouth as many basic services are cut off. The highest rate of malnutrition is among children under two years old, and the death rate is 2-3x the national average,” commented Zureikat Sa’ar, head of Al Mezan. For years Israel has denied the allegations of UN and human rights organisations, but Israeli human rights groups have always maintained that Gaza is a prison – and a hellish one – for

Palestinians. It’s been a long time since the Gaza Strip was a major tourist destination. The vast majority of Gaza’s tourist economy has been propped up by Egypt for many years. But after the Egyptian revolution in 2011, tourist numbers began to fall. The opening of the Rafah border crossing between Egypt and Gaza in August 2012 was supposed to be the start of a new era for Gaza’s citizens, but the opening was short lived. It soon became clear that the Israelis would never allow any easing of the blockade. In November 2013 a wave of protests swept across the region after the death of Palestinian activist, Shadi al-Ghoul (a Palestinian from Gaza), at the hands of Israeli forces. During the protests Israel used lethal force against unarmed Palestinian protesters,
