He heard it again and entered the shop. Just in front of the counter, there was a lady with a maid outfit and a face so cute and innocent. (She wanted to make a discount, of course, a normal price) "If you want to sell this, then sell it to me for 50% off. I'll be a customer. I don't know why you're looking for someone to buy it, but I'll be a customer." (To have a look for a good item) Why was he searching for a poor customer? What were these two selling? (The innocent-faced maid) "Good choice!" In that kind of mood, he should buy it! He browsed around. And he saw a mysterious lamp for sale, which he had never seen before. (So he purchased the lamp) "Ah... Strange! Before I got this lamp, I was doing okay. Thanks to this lamp, I have become more popular. Compared to before, I'm doing a lot better! There's nothing that would make people lose respect for me. Nice that I got this." But suddenly, he heard the sound of drums, and he felt strange. He left the shop, and a sound "skm, skm, skm" echoed around his ears. It was so noisy, that even his ears started ringing. (The number of minutes that passed in real time can be adjusted) (Up to 10 people can join in) "He said that he wanted to join the event" Since Magic Manny is unable to perform any magic spells, he cannot perform any tricks, and he cannot learn

March 14th, 2011, 02:58 After reading the Champions Rest article, I ran through my groups Champion's Rest game from FFG. I was having a bit of trouble finding a good way to run it, as mentioned in the article, and some of the official events like Battle for Dazar'alor and the Conclave have their own event cards and rules that make it hard to run these as a stand alone game. I did my best to figure it out. So, let me cut to the chase: I think this is a great adventure path. I really liked the stuff that came from the paper rules and I hope I can find a way to use them at next years FFG convention (or maybe do a small con) under the Champions Rest banner, since I do like reading event cards and they aren't difficult to find. I had a lot of fun but, like everyone, I had a few problems that I thought up a solution for. I'm going to share that solution with you now: PROBLEM: I found it tedious to keep track of who was with what faction. This might have caused some confusion amongst my opponents, who expected to see their respective faction well represented amongst other factions. In the paper rules, they included rules for representing the factions you are without an out-of-faction character using the universal "swearing-and-fighting" rules. I adapted the universal system to represent the factions members among your party. Factions gained and lost bodies depending on the tables below: Note: I had to change the table to remove stars and to add "1" next to each of the categories just so I could print it out and save everyone else time. These are the starting numbers for everyone. You will have one more fighter and one more meleeist at the start. You wont have a commander and/or 2 fighters. You will pick 1 NPC as your vassal (or whatever you think fits your character). For your last selection, the fighter you were with and I will name everyone's NPC you would pick as your vassal. This is how we got 6 bodies (not 7 because 1/2 to 3 fighters). I gave myself 3 bodies (about 2/3) and only 1/2 of my NPC,

After completing the “Lightning Globe” project in 1895, the Japanese government issued a conditional decree to ban the import of the foreign steamships, whilst requiring local rivals to use the privatized “Great Honshu Railway” to transport goods to other provinces. By 1920, almost all of the rail lines had collapsed due to financial difficulties, famine, and warfare, leaving the country impoverished and fallen. In this scenario, you will take charge of the Nankai Railroad, the only private corporation to successfully revive the rail lines in that tumultuous period. You must manage your company and earn money from your employees and customers, whilst trying to keep the workers from going on a massive wildcat strike during a time of critical concern for your business. There will be upgrades to the trade lines so that they can function more smoothly, along with a customisable train control system so you can make your trains run perfectly. Your company will have to expand and improve your fleets of trains and freight trains, with the help of the government to maintain enough supplies for your employees, and also handling a surge of goods transported by ship, since the rail lines have become crippled. As an historical sim game, you will have to raise and control your personnel efficiently so they do not become restless. You will also have to carefully manage the relationship with the local townspeople, often seen as a nuisance, as you pave your way to the biggest railroad in East Asia. So to help you in your task, we have set up the “Rail Map Expansion” which provides three additional maps that are reproductions of actual maps of Japan, excluding Hokkaido and Tsushima, giving you two additional maps and making up for the missing maps in the scenario. An event will occur every so often in which you must distribute goods to those in need, whilst also bringing in coal for the rail yards. So it is not just a simple game of building and improving, but a full social simulation game that will require you to think carefully and wisely. Features: •

Historical simulation game - no medieval times, just go back to the early 1900's • New map expansion, featuring 3 additional maps to enhance the game • Train designer to make your own trains and build your own railway • Save your data to the cloud. If you import and lose your saves, you can restore them from the cloud • Detailed business management • Real time events • High-quality graphics • Unique setting
