Elden Ring is an action RPG, created by the development team responsible for the Destiny of an Empire. The action RPG's genre is a game that nurtures the heart of sword-and-sorcery, where the player roams a vast game world and fights endless hordes of monsters. ACTIONS Players can move freely in a non-linear game world. There are many types of equipment available, such as a melee weapon, or a magic weapon, and armor. Players must be careful when using the equipment that they are holding, so the HP of their equipment will decrease. While using an equipped weapon, the player will also receive feedback in the form of on-screen effects. Players can buy and sell equipment, and also recycle the equipment parts to increase their level. In order to perform a specific action, players must first combine weapons and armor, and also fuse magic with magic.

GAME SYSTEM: Players are able to exchange and recycle items in the game world. Equipment can be exchanged for credits at an inn or mining workplace, and for equipment components at a storage room, while currency can be used to buy items from the vendors at the various towns. The amount of equipment required to purchase a specific item differs based on the level of the item, and the higher the level, the higher the price. In the game, players will defeat the enemies that they encounter in a variety of ways. As players obtain experience, they will be able to train their skills by using equipment, increase their hit rate, and use certain elemental skills. The more experience you gain, the stronger you will become. When an enemy is defeated, you will obtain the EXP that you obtained, and will also obtain the loot that is hidden in the monster's body. Players can select the monsters that they have defeated and mount them as pets. These pets will automatically follow the player and attack the enemies that they encounter. Green energy output up, but not big enough to stop disaster looming Despite the increased use of 'green' energy, Britain is still to its target of meeting 17% of its energy needs from renewable sources THE UK has more than doubled its use of 'green' energy in the past five years, but it still only accounts for around 5% of the country's total energy needs, according to a new study. Although the government claims that at least 17% of energy
