6. Make sure the background of the PSD file is masked and the image is selected and active.
Now you can make changes to the masked image. The changes may seem minimal, but they affect the entire image; for instance, if you double-click on the layer thumbnail for the background layer, a Photoshop workspace opens. You can make large or small changes to the background layer, such as changing the color, hue, or saturation or moving the image. You can also change the type. 7. Use the Filter ⇒ Adjust ⇒ Curves command to increase the contrast. Make sure that the Curves Adjustment layer is active. Select the Auto command. This places the Adjustment layer on top of the active mask. This mask protects the image's area. Figure 8-7 shows you the curve that appears when you adjust the Curves command. Photoshop uses a curve to adjust the brightness and contrast. The white area is the brightest, and the black area is the darkest. You can adjust the curve to create a subtle or dramatic shift in brightness or contrast.

FIGURE 8-7: Adjust the curve to make changes to the brightness and contrast. 8. The image has a yellow cast that stands out against the blue sky. Try adjusting the Saturation slider to darken the color. In this example, the layer is treated as a screen shot. Therefore, the very bright yellow color of the sky has brightened the image even though it sits at the top of the layer. So, increase the Saturation value to darken the color. Figure 8-8 shows the result of this step. In this figure, the Adjustment layer is treated as the active layer and uses a different palette because it is in a different workspace from the image layer. Click outside the Adjustment layer to get back to the image layer. 9. Click the Colorize check box and choose any color from the Palette to white the image. You can also apply any color to the image using the color picker. 10. Select a dark gray and apply the Screen blend mode. Or you can pick any dark color and darken the image using the Screen blend mode. 11. Photoshop uses an active mask to protect the image layer. Make sure the background is active. The masking functions hide areas of

12) Open Source This is a free and open source vector graphics editor. It's quick and easy to use. It also has an optional plugin for brushes for professional-quality results. 13) StudioBinder StudioBinder is a super-fast modern vector tool with advanced features. Its user interface is simple, clean, and very responsive. StudioBinder is very easy to use and Photoshop-like in the features it has. It also has a built in workflow management for creating 2D and 3D environments from Illustrator or Photoshop. 14) Adobe Illustrator This is Adobe's de facto choice for creating vector graphics. It is considered to be the industry standard and is widely used by designers, artists, and students. 15) Adobe Kuler Kuler is an Adobe community initiative that allows you to create color palettes by viewing other people's color palettes. It is based on a concept from the Adobe marketing department called "Color Theory". Adobe Kuler gives you the opportunity to create color palettes that are similar to those you may have seen in the marketing department (i.e. the more "Kuler-like" the palette becomes, the more points you get). 16) Adobe Brushes Brushes lets you add brushes for the text or bezier tool. They have a variety of options, but the most useful options are: Size, Blend, Stroke, Blur, Tilt, Orbit, Color, Size Variation, Drop Shadow, Hard Edge, Vignette, Soft Edge, Soft Roundness, and Pattern. There are also options for creating brushes from photos, patterns, and automatically creating brushes for you. Brushes is amazing! 17) Adobe Typekit Adobe Typekit is a Web application offering scalable typefaces from many leading type designers. You can use Typekit on mobile, desktop, and the web. They have a library of fonts that are free to use for personal, commercial, and nonprofit applications. They have many high-quality font styles that come with all the functionality of Adobe Typekit. For more information on the capabilities of Adobe Typekit, see the Adobe Typekit website and if you want to know how to get started, see the Adobe Typekit tutorial. 18) Adobe Form Adobe Form is an Adobe add-on 05a79cecff

A heartwarming act of kindness that will likely go unnoticed but will indeed get noticed when the workers learn about it come December. Now that you are retired, maybe its time to go back to school. Maybe it will be an M.F.A., a J.D., a culinary arts certificate, some type of trade, whatever you want to do, be it an artist or a scientist. To do this and pay the bills, put that mountain of debt on your heart away until you decide what you want to study. In the meantime, we're going to give you several ideas of how you can earn money online. #1. Making Money Online by Using a Blog The quickest and easiest way to make money online is by writing a blog or article of some sort about a certain topic. This can be completely tailored to you or you can chose what topic you want to write about. Many companies or even publishers will have websites looking for articles, and you can write them yourself for free. After that, there are companies like Upwork or Freelancer that will hire people on a project basis. This usually works best for those who have a lot of experience with writing articles or have a large following. The pay is a bit lower here, but it can still add up to hundreds or thousands of dollars a month. #2. Do Adult Diapers

Another way you can make a good amount of money is to become a diaper seller. Many moms now have all of their diapers in one big bag or container, because it's just so much easier and easier to do laundry. So basically, you can buy the diapers in bulk, and then sell them on Amazon, eBay, or local shops that deal with people who want to buy in bulk. Most people will love the idea of buying diapers that you can use yourself and know that they are affordable. After you sell enough diapers, it's time to invest in some more. #3. Get a Job Once you have been doing a few of these activities for a few months, you may want to try to get a job. This does involve a lot of hard work. You need to get up early, eat well, go to bed early, be on your best behavior, and possibly even find some free time. However, you'll be rewarded with a good amount of money. Many people have reported earning anywhere from $50,000

What's New In?

Q: How to sum values of a dictionary in Django I have the following models.py class Invoice(models.Model): customer = models.ForeignKey(Customer, on_delete=models.CASCADE) bank_details =

models.TextField() amount = models.FloatField()
#code to implement invoice summary class UserInvoice(models.Model): invoice = models.ForeignKey(Invoice, related_name="user_invoice_related") user = models.ForeignKey(User, related_name="user_invoice_related") points_total = models.FloatField() def __str__(self): return
f'{self.user}/{self.invoice}'

What I want is to show the total amount per customer. When a customer make a payment a new line is added to the invoice dictionary and an amount is deducted from the invoice. But, i'm stuck while trying to work out how to check if the invoice has already been paid and if so, which customer? A: Use below filter

{% for user_invoice in user_invoice_related %} {% if user_invoice.invoice_paid %}
{{ user_invoice.amount }} {% else %}

{ {user_invoice.amount - user_invoice.amount} }
{% endif %}

A: You can use a custom manager to accomplish this: #managers.py class

CustomerInvoiceManager(models.Manager):
def get_total_invoice(self):
    total_invoice = 0.0
    for invoice in self.all():
        if invoice.payment_status == 'paid':
            total_invoice += invoice.amount
    return total_invoice
