This is how I refresh the controllers: I'm running the app with the debugger and doing...

this.getClass().forName("com.soupex.controller.application.ApplicationController$").newInstance();

... in the src/groovy/com/soupex/controller/application/ApplicationController.groovy and refresh the browser, that reloads the URL. However I need to do this in the live server using an API call or something like this. I'm just not sure how. Thanks for the help. A: You could start up the WAR, load it in the browser, issue an (or whatever your URL is) and see if it works. I don't know the details of loading a WAR from the API, but presumably you could load it, issue an http request to the appropriate URL, and then load the WAR in a browser and issue another http request to the appropriate URL. The invention relates to an apparatus for the automatic control of the flow of a fluid, such as air, and more specifically the invention relates to an improved metering assembly for such fluid flow control. In many industrial processes such as mining, metal processing, and others, the output of a process or work station, such as a blast furnace or a smelter, may be measured in terms of the amount of a desired material being produced. Accordingly, it is necessary to control the flow of the material being discharged to the process or work station. One method for controlling the flow of a material being discharged in terms of a desired amount is to have air discharged in a continuous manner to the process or work station. However, as can be appreciated, while the air volume is capable of being controlled, the 6d1f23a050
